

A computer-readable recording medium recorded with a numerical analysis program, a numerical analysis system, and a numerical analysis method, where creation and modification of an analytic model is simplified by applying load region data for specifying a load applying region, to a master model representing a shape of an object.